the metrayed it, for remone only understiled by himself, and to whom perhaps, that party owns us deep and as bitter resentment as to any other man who less, or has lived. Mr. Calbonn himself does not presend that the even understood the principles of the fact that the found lessure, for the first lime, to acquain himself with the true character of hat countitation under which he was then the mount officer, having already aspired to be the first. Until then, the was too enger in the race of ambitton, and belonged to a party, as he tells us, too drunk with prover to think of such things. A part of this adoubtless true—but Mr. Calbonn, in part aining these new studies, was perhaps goided to his complexions by considerations of which he says nothing. Prectical matter of fact men remember only, that in that day Mr. Adams was President that you, sir, and your friends on the Bank and the heavy man the President himself; that Mr. Calboun, too, belonged to the same party, on the ducket of which his pretensions stood next no order of succession, enjoying sours of the five of the dominant party than the President himself; that Mr. Calboun, too, belonged to the same party, on the ducket of which his pretensions stood next party is to be done? The State Rights party, the always been the pix aller of those who do but continue to worship in the church where their fathers worshipped before them, so did the few years and of those who do but continue to worshipped before them, so did the few years and unquestioned ability of this greateman can place him to a position to repreach the sole prudence and dull apprehension of the few years, and unquestioned ability of this greateman con place him to a position to repreach the sole prudence and dull apprehension of the few years, and unquestioned ability of this greateman con place him to a position to repreach the sole prudence and dull apprehension of the

these were strongly drawn out towards him. The came in which he was suffering, though lost, as I believed, by his missionagement, was my cause, and all his faults were forgotten. I had before seen him actively on gaged in the support of every one of these measures, the permissions effects of which he was then anxiom to remove: but I defermined it should be enough, that he had reposted of his errors, and was striving to repair them. In that moment, they were blotted from my mind, as I hoped forever. A more resolute and manifer bearing would have commanded more of my respect, but he had all my sympathy. When I saw him thus before the Philiatanes to make them sport, could he have braced his nerves to the occasion, and bowed himself, in his might, against the pillars of that Temple of Dagon, crushing himself and his persecutors in one undistinguished ruin. I should have left that a tear to his fate would been dishoner to his memory. How proudly then would I have taken up the triumphant funeral channt of the noble poet!

Thy same, our charging beets along.

By Virgia-vices poured!

To seep weeld do thy glery arong. Then shall not be deplaced!!"

It is sad to recollect, (and though the recollection be of one who always stood front to front opposed to you, an implicable though noble for, to none will the recollection be andder than to you) that, in that moment, came pealing through the air the

had not only voted the compromise, but bound their consciences, as with fetters of iron, to held it mored, devoting themselves to the infernal gods, if they should ever vio-late it. Now, sir, you will bear me out, in saying, that no other gentleman, North of the Chesaprake, uttered one word on that been gotten up in Mr. Calhours resolutions, he playing first fiddle for that night only. This free baundt, however, appears to have been the price of his services for the rest of the season. In consideration of that, to he agreed to forget and forgives all the past, and to believe that these new converts to State Rights are quite sincere. Pity that I be had not availed humself of the opportunity to obtain the repeal of the Porce Bill, enacted by the voice of these very men, and condemmed by the whole tenor of the resolutions, just adopted with such marrelious unantumity?

But I have wandered from my purpose, I van about to speak of a cence, which I can never recall, without being reminded of the automiching effortingly, which at this day, calhorates, as a triumph, that of our abject bumiliation. I allode to the passage of the Campromise Bill. It was my for tune to be present on that memorable night, and surely nathing that over passed under my eyes is surer wind in my recollections than that whole some. To you, Sir, such things have least the interest of novelty which they were to me; and I any, there force, he excussed for speaking, even to your, and a Southern Convention was and an actor. I am persuaded, however, that you will an it at a receil, distinctly, over principles, or your cause? Such marks as a sure a sure a vittees and an actor. I am persuaded, however, that you will see that it are easily distinctly, over principles, or pour cause? Such must have been the field, if the were such as and an actor. I am persuaded, however, that you will see that I shall insention.

It was rather a conversation in the Sec.

to the infernal gods, if they should over you. By way of P. S. to tone my, that if any test in Now, air, you will hear me out, in anying, that no other geotheman, North of the Chespeaks, uttered one word on that eccasion, and that seither of these eaid more or less, than I have not down.

Where, then, is that pledge, on which Mr. Calhoun would have the world believe that be has a right to rely su confidently!
Where is his authority for vanning his some yood faith, and fir saying, we has he as so of maint, and fir saying, we has he so of maint, and fir saying, we have so to touch the somepromies, lest, by se doing, he might release others, from their pladge!
By whom made?

The knews, sir, as well as you or 1; but a since he has taken service sinder the worry per, hawful! he eareful not to tell. He would rather have it believed that the great danger of the violation of the compromies in from you. And yet he house, that the cold intelligible pledge upon the subject was given by you.

"Amen. at a Trature."—The early American settlement of New Design,—now in Munroe county,—was visited by a respectable and piece Baptist minister from Kentucky by the name of Dodge. At that period the people who were religiously disposed were Baptists or Methodists, who must longether on Sabbaths for social worship.—While this assembled, one Lord's day Eld. Dodge, who was a good looking man, and decently attired came in, an entire stranger.

Wm. Murray, a plous Methodist brother, suspected from his appearance and decestly attired came in, an entire stranger. Wm. Murray, a pious Methodist brother, suspected from his appearance and deportment that the stranger was a preacher, or at least a praying man, invited him to pray. Dodge had a very aslemn and feeling manner in prayer, that greatly affected the feelings of a little Dutch brother and Methodist, who was very much in the habit of pronouncing the audible amen during the prayers of such prayers as he knew were provided in the prayers as a perplexing case. The speaker was an entire stranger, his character and profession knewn to no one present. The little Dutchman meditated for a while, appeared to be burdeoud in spirit, and at last, under the exciting feelings of the prayer, exclaimed with peculiar force of utterance, "amen at a venture."—West. probably ron up to 5,000; and that Mr. Pletcher (Adm.) is re elected to Congress. In the Canadian district, the Locofoco pepers claim the election of Mr. John Smith over Heman Allen, whose vote upon the assurabity bill was unpopular in that latitude, while the Whig papers say, there is no choice. All that I can ascertain is that the cun is very close; but the probability is that John Smith is elected. The Whigs have gained several members of the House, and will not only have an immease unjority on joint ballet, but probably a majority larger than they had last year. I know no reason why the Whigs should not shout as lastily over Vermont saved, as the Globe over Missouri.

If the Sub-Tressury scheme be so favorable, and the National Bank so hostile to Southern interests, as Mr. Calboun and his clique represent, why it is that Martin Van Buren and all his Northern friends are so much in favor of the former, and opposed to the latter? Is Nurthern sagarity less teen than formerly where Northern interests are involved? Or are the Northern democrats as suddenly generous that they are prepared to do every thing they can to build up Southern commerce, and prostrate their own?—

Does Mr. Calboun expect the Southern acoule to believe this absordity?—Ligichburg Virginian.
